

Here is the third part of a Bible reading plan which covers the Old Testament once and the New Testament twice within a year. Whole books (with one exception) are read consecutively and generally in chronological order, and the shorter New Testament epistles are each read at one sitting. In this way, the overall thrust of each book and the relationships of its parts are readily grasped, with the help of the Holy Spirit. On average, four chapters a day are read, but divisions are made at logical points within each book. The general pattern for each three months is to read about a quarter of the Old Testament, followed by a half of the New Testament. You might like to divide each day's reading between morning and evening. If you find four chapters a day too much, you could split each reading over two days and thus complete the plan within two years.
